Pancras pars. Finsbury and Marylebone boroughs, E. Middlesex, 5 m. NNW. of St. Paul's, on H. Hill, where Jack Cade beheaded Thorpe 1461, is a healthy spot commanding a fine prospect of London, and so called from the tollgate belonging to the bishop, which stood at the top on the Gt. N. road. Pop. 4302; houses 676, many old,—with 3 chapels, savings bk. (2021l. from 161 depositors), many boarding schools, including a Jews' sch. and synagogue, cemetery of 20 acres (established 1839), water works, Chomeley's free gram. school (777l.) and chapel (now in ruins) on the site of an old hermitage or lepers' hosp. (?) found. by W. Pole in Edw. IV.'s time, Wollaston's and Pauncefort's almsh. (150l.), girls' school (35l.), asylum for idiots, small pox hosp. (brought from King's Cross); poor r. —l.; real prop. —l.; charities 1058l. St. Michael Cur. (Lon.) val. 550l., patr. Bishop, who holds the manor; church, reb. 1832 on the brow of the hill in place of Chomeley's chapel, has tombs of Platt (founder of the fellowships at Camb.), Bishop Atterbury's brother (once lecturer), Chief Justice Pemberton, the Paunceforts, and Coleridge and his nephew Hartley, who both died here (the former, 1834). Baker the chronicler was a resident, and the great Lord Bacon died at Lord Arundel's house from a cold caught in trying the experiment of preserving a dead fowl with snow. Opposite Cromwell Ho. (now a school) where the Protector lived, is his secretary's, or Marvell's, cottage. At the taverns here travellers used to swear over a pair of horns "not to kiss the maid when you may kiss the mistress, unless you like the maid better,—not to eat brown bread when you can get white, unless you like the brown better,"—and so forth. A point near Southgate Ho. commands a noble view of great extent. To save the steep hill, which rises 1 in 12 at some parts, a tunnel 300 yards long under Hornsey Lane was projected by Vazie 1809, through the blue clay, which falling in when about 130 yds. were cut, an archway with 3 semi-arches at top was substituted, and opened 1813,—the new road leading past the Whittington almshouses and the site of a lazar house found. (Edw. IV.) by W. Poole; fossil copal, etc. were found in the cutting.

Highlands, The, or Hill country of Scotland, bounded partly by the Grampians, and lying W. and N. of a line from Dumbarton, through the passes of Aberfoil, Comrie, Killiecrankie (all in Perth.) to Braemar and round to Inverness, which is a sort of capital, is a land of mountains, rivers, and lakes, peopled by the Gael or Celt, a race differing in blood, language, dress, from their Saxon conquerors, before whom their forefathers retired to the hills like the old Britons, to whom they were allied. Here they lived in a savage and unsettled condition; were brave and hardy, but given to fighting and plunder, and known to their lowland neighbours only by repeated forays. Under their chiefs, they remained independent of the scottish kings, though tamed by Jas. V. (the Snowdon knight of Scott's 'Lady of the Lake') and some of his predecessors. In 1645, most of the clans assisted Montrose in behalf of Ch. I.; they were reduced by Cromwell, who planted garrisons at Inverness, Fort William, etc.; rose again at the revolution for Jas. II.,—and for his children, under Marr 1715, and again 1745, when with Ch. Stuart at their head they marched to Derby; but in the mean time the country had been laid open by military roads made by Gen. Wade 1737, — and the power of the chiefs was broken 1748 by the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions. Surface, about 13,500 sq. m., including Sutherland, Ross, Inverness, Argyll, parts of Elgin, Banff, Perth, Stirling, Dumfries; pop. about 305,000, much reduced since the last century by emigration, and dispersed over sheep-farms, or along the coast (and in the West. Islds.), but still gaelic-speaking. The first coach went through the highlands 1811; steamers now run along the W. shores, and through the Caledonian canal; and the value of land, stock, etc. has greatly increased (7 or 8 times in some cases) by the making of good roads. The clans and their badges were and are: Buchanan (S. highlands) birch, Cameron (Middle) oak, Campbell (W.) myrtle, Chisholm (N.) alder, Colquhoun (S.) hazel, Cumming (NE.) common willow, Drummond holly, Farquharson (NE.) purple foxglove, Ferguson poplar, Forbes (NE.) broom, Fraser (N.) yew, Gordon (N.) ivy, Graham (S.) laurel, Grant (Mid.) cranberry heath, Gunn rosewort, Lamont (W.) crab-apple tree, McAllister five-leaved heath, McDonald bell heath, McDonnell mountain heath, McDougall (W.) cypress, McFarlane cloudberry bush, McGregor pine, McIntosh (Mid.) boxwood, McKay (N.) bullrush, McKenzie (N.) deer-grass, McKinnon St. John's wort, McLachlan (W.) mountain ash, McLean (W.) blackberry heath, McLeod (N.) red whortleberry, McNab rose blackberry, McNeil sea-weed, McPherson (Mid.) variegated boxwood, McQuarrie blackthorn, McRae (N.) fir clubmoss, Munro eagle's feathers, Menzies ash, Murray juniper, Ogilvie hawthorn, Oliphant great maple, Robertson (S.) fern, Rose sweetbrier, Ross bearberry, Sinclair (N.) clover, Stewart (S.) thistle, Sutherland cat's-tail-grass. Killarney, Lakes of (66, 74) between the above, and the Tomies, Purple, Glen-à, and other peaks of MacGillycuddy's Reeks on the W., and which the best judges think to be the finest in the British islds., comprise the Upper, Torc, and Lower, lakes, at the head of R. Laune, in the country of the O'Donoghues of Ross, a branch of the MacCarthy's More. The Upper, the smallest, 1½ m. by ½ m. or 8 in circuit, is in the midst of mountains, with several small richly-wooded islds., as Rossbirkie, Stag, Eagle, Roynane, Arbutus—so called after that tree, which abounds all over the lakes, and was brought from Spain; near it Derrycunidy and its cascade, and the best view is from the police station. Long Range channel, 6 miles long, leads past the Eagle's nest (1700 ft. high, with a most extraordinary echo), and the Wier bridge into Torc or Middle Lake, 2½ m. by ¾, under Torc mountain, with Dinish, Brickeen, and other islds.; near it is Torc fall, coming from the Devil's Punch-bowl in Mangerton mountain (which has a noble view), and Coom-na-goppul, or Glen of the Horse. The beautiful Glen-a-bay (where the lakes join) leads to the Lower or largest lake, ½ m. by 2½, which has 35 islds. (limestone) large and small and well wooded, as Ross, with O'Donoghue's castle, whence that hero leapt into the lake, appearing sometimes like the spectre of the Brocken, and where stone hammers are found with which the copper mines were worked.—“sweet Innisfallen,” and its old abbey, where the ‘Annals’ were written,—Rabbits, O'Donoghue's Prison, Table and Horse, the Stag with its echoes,—and others. Around on the E. are Aghadoc cathedral, round tower, and Bp.'s Chair; Kenmare Pk., which has the Clogh-na-cuddy stone with the ‘foot-marks,’ Lissavigen druid circle (2 miles off), Muckruss abbey cloister ruins; to the W. is Dunloe Gap, a wild pass, with its castle, Ogham cave, Cwm duv or black valley, logan stone, etc. Besides the arbutus, which grows 7 and 9 ft. girth, and other trees, the rare and beautiful bristle fern is found near Torc fall,—also the osmunda regalis or large flowering fern, pinguicula grandiflora, etc.
